April 3, 1914

Teachers examinations are being given at the High School. About forty applicants. Marion Cross, author of "Early Days in Central Texas," was in Comanche this week visiting the scenes of fifty years ago. Mr. Cross visited in the Edna Hill community and ate from the same table that he ate on at the home of Mr. Barbee in the sixties. Among the topics of interest to people in this county is the book written by Mr. Cross: The Murder of Uncle Peter Johnson of Comanche County; the Killing of Mrs. Williams; the Salt Creek Fight; At Santa Anna Mountain; and The Dove Creek Fight.

The Wesley Bible Class had new members Sunday and were steadily climbing towards the 100 mark. Rev. Cartwright will address the class Sunday and Easter Hall, President, urges a full attendance.

The Comanche High School baseball team defeated McIlhenny college at Stephenville Saturday 10 to 2 and defeated the Downing town team Monday 9 to 3. The second team played Gustine at Greiner Saturday, winning 7 to 0.

The Comanche High School girls will play the John Tarleton college girls a game of basketball here today.

At the city election held Tuesday the Chicken Law was voted down, so now instead of having to keep your chickens out of your neighbors' flowers; you must keep your flowers out of your neighbors' chickens.

W. A. Montgomery, M. V. Kinner and C. F. Jacobs were elected aldermen.

John Newton Farmer, 65, died Tuesday.

Herbert Taylor, son of Mr. S. Mrs. W. A. Taylor of Siding, died in a Brownwood hospital Monday and was buried in Oakwood Cemetery Tuesday. He was 21 years of age.

In order to promote the dairy interest of the county Higginbotham's have shipped in a carload of Jersey cattle to be sold to the farmers.

James Martin, 84, who lives on his grandson, Zack West, Logan's Gap was in Comanche Saturday. The Martin family came to Comanche County when the city of Comanche was known and Cora, the original county seat, was a new frontier place.

The Socialists held a meet last week and nominated a complete ticket headed by E. M. Gales for County Judge and Wallace Wagner for Representative.

Martin and Company is having the largest millinery trade in the history of their business. We have three trimmers working all the time and they are so far behind their work that they are having to work nights in order to catch up.

The Philathea Embroidery Club met April 2nd with Mrs. Merton Harris. A delightful afternoon was enjoyed and dainty refreshments were served to the following: Misses Reese, Keely, Hook, Bolding, Martin, McNeill and Edna Harris, Owens, Emery, Jessup, Blue, and Smith.

PLANS TO HANDLE REDUCED ACREAGE HERE

(By J. A. Barton, Co. Agent)
According to Washington the cotton program of reduction of acres has gone over and all cotton farmers who have signed contracts will be accepted when necessary corrections are made and review boards, both state and district have passed contracts.

Farmers who now have this contracted acreage are asking the question—Who will measure off the land? At this time each farmer is to measure off the amount of land that is to be contracted to the Government and take off as contracted acres. Each cotton farm will be inspected in July by a local cotton inspector, who will not only measure the cotton land contracted to the Government but will also measure the necessary measure the land.

SEARCH MADE IN THIS SECTION FOR BARROW

Officers of Brown, Comanche, Coleman, and all surrounding counties have been on the lookout for Clyde Barrow, desperate West-Dallas bad man, and his cigar-smoking woman companion, Bonnie Parker, in this section since the hold-up of a Blanket service station operator and night-watchman Monday morning about 2:45 o'clock.

The Dallas desperado and his woman companion are credited with the slaying of two Texas Highway Patrolmen near Grapevine Sunday afternoon, and a state-wide search is being pushed to capture the couple, as well as Raymond Hamilton and his woman companion, pals of Barrow.

Federal, State and County officers are searching for this mob.

About two-thirty o'clock Monday morning, local officers state, a dark sedan crossed the south side of Comanche's square headed west and was next to the curb near the business houses. An all-night cafe employee is said to have noticed the car, which is believed to be the same one used by the Blanket filling station robbers.

The building was recently remodeled and fixtures placed for convenience of customers. Mr. Gore stated.

Mr. Gore until recently was connected with Tate & Son, as a tobacco salesman. Prior to taking that position he was connected with the same parties in the grocery and hardware business for several years before they discontinued that line.

There were 550 votes cast as compared to 536 last year when there was a hotly contested race for Mayor. It was the heaviest vote in twenty years with the exception of 1931 when 652 votes were cast.

Heavily armed with checkers and boards, five citizens of the May community and as many from the city of Stephenville invaded Comanche Tuesday afternoon to settle the alleged championship among checker players of Central West Texas.

RELIEF ASSN. AND CITY CIVIC GROUPS ARE INTERESTED

Lake Eanes Park, already the pride of Comanche, is to be made one of the most beautiful parks in Texas if plans underway by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in co-operation with the American Legion, City of Comanche and other civic organizations are carried to completion.

W. K. Woodruff, Project Superintendent of the Work Division at the Relief headquarters in Comanche, has drawn plans for the proposed improvements and they are on display at his office for public inspection.

It has been pointed out that the City Park is in fact a County Park as the citizenship of the entire county as well as visitors from other sections of Texas have a standing invitation from City authorities to make free use of the park as a meeting place for family reunions, picnics, swimming and any other outings they might enjoy. During the summer hundreds daily take advantage of this opportunity and Lake Eanes Park has become one of the most popular gathering places in Central West Texas.

Mr. Woodruff said that he was unable to estimate the amount of work that the Relief Association would be able to furnish, but plans for the improvements are extensive and include building a semi driveway around the park, centered with a midway of flowers and shrubbery on the north and east and an inclined drive up the bluff to the south. Other plans call for cleaning out the swimming pool and lining it with a rock wall and making similar improvements in the small creek into which the pool drains.

The American Legion in session Wednesday evening ratified the plan and called on all other civic organizations to join in the work.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Old Alex Andrews, international fascist, kidnaps his own daughter, Ellie, immediately after her marriage to King Westley. He takes her from New York to Miami in his yacht. She escapes, and while making her way back to Westley and New York, via bus, meets Peter Warner. They are constantly together, and when Peter Ellie's money is gone, she is forced to rely on Peter. When a newspaper headline reveals that Andrews has offered $10,000 for Ellie's return, Ellie
and Peter are compelled, through fear of discovery, to leave the bus. They do and continue on foot to New York.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The hitch-hike began in earnest.
One motorist gave them a "lift" to the next town. Here, they all disembarked while the car-owner had his lunch. Peter and Ellie, busily engaged in conversation, wheeled suddenly as the car started off—with Peter's bag! Peter's legs whipped under him and twenty minutes later he returned—plus the bag and the car—but minus the driver. He was wiping a small out on his chin as Ellie climbed in beside him.

"Just a road thief," explained
Peter. "Picks people up and runs off with their stuff. What a racket!"
"What'd you give him for the car?"
asked Ellie.
"A black eye."
"We might be put in jail."
"Not a bad idea. They feed you there."

Night fell as the car continued its panting and chortling through the flat meadows and over high hills.
Once again, though only three hours
from New York, they stopped at a roadside tourist camp. Peter put up the "Walls of Jericho"—the

"I'm sorry," she whispered. She disappeared behind the curtain-her side of the room. Sobbing, she crawled into bed. For the first time in her life Ellie Andrews had been deeply hurt.

Peter stared at the ceiling. He lit a cigarette; the ashes fell from
it till the hot glow bit at his finger.
He glanced over in Ellie's direction.
He called softly: "Hey, Brat—you mean that? Would you really go?"

There was no answer.
"Hey, Brat—"

Still no answer. He jumped out of bed and peered around the curtain. Ellie was fast asleep, her tear-stained face resting on the pillow.
Peter watched her tenderly for a moment, then, deciding against waking her, stalked the room quietly in deep thought. He tip-toed to his coat and slipped a letter from the inside pocket. He read it through each sentence making an indelible stamp.

It read: "Dear Peter: The firm I wrote you about is definitely interested. If you could come to New York I feel confident we could close at terms satisfactory to us. Their last offer was five thousand in advance against a royalty. Certainly we can get more. Let me know when you leave, and for Heaven's sake, don't go tramping off to some crazy island again. At least not until after we close the deal."
"Five thousand in advance," murmured Peter.

Then, suddenly making up his mind, he dressed hurriedly. Grabbing his suitcase, he started out the door, stopping to throw a kiss to the sleeping Ellie. In trade for his blanket hung over a clothesline that divided the small room in two. He stopped suddenly, for Ellie's remark required answering.

"Haven't you ever wanted to fall
in love, Peter?"
"Me?"

"Yes. Haven't you thought about it, at all? Seems to me you could make some girl wonderfully happy."
"Maybe," said Peter, disdainfully.
"Sure—sure. I've thought about it.
Who hasn't? If I ever met the right sort of a girl I'd—Yeah,
but where are you going to find her
—somebody that's real—somebody that's alive? They don't come that way any more. I've even been sucker enough to make plans. I saw an island in the Pacific once.
Never been able to forget it. That where I'd like to take her. But she'd have to be the sort of girl that'd jump in the surf with me on moonlight nights—and love it as much as I did. You know, those nights when you and the moon and the water all become one—when something comes over you—and you feel that you're part of something big and marvelous. Those are the only places to live. Where the stars are so close over your head that you feel you could reach right up and grab them around."

Ellie sighed. Her eyes were dreamy. She shivered a little as she realized she was excluded from Peter's idea of Heaven.

Peter continued. "Certainly, I've been thinking about it. Boy, if I could ever find a girl who's hungry for those things! I'm going to swim in the surf with her! I'm going to reach up and grab stars for her—and cry with her. I'm going to kiss her wet lips—and—"

He stopped, for Ellie was standing near him, her eyes wide and burning. She dropped to her knees beside him.

Her voice was full, husky. "Take me with you, Peter. Take me to your island. I want to do all those things you talked about."

Peter stared at her lovely face...
the round half-lidded lips, the delirious eyes. His heart cried out with an impulse to crush her in his arms.

"Better," he said, hoarsely, "go back to your bed."

"I love you," said Ellie, simply.
"You're forgetting you're married."

Ellie was tense. "I don't care. I love you. Nothing else matters. We can run away. Everything'll take care of itself. Please, Peter. You can't go out of my life now. I couldn't live without you. Oh,
Peter—"

Her arms closed about him tightly, her head falling forward on his chest. They stood silent for a moment. Then, Peter's voice, scarcely audible:

"Better go back to your bed."
There was a lengthy pause. Then Ellie raised her tear-stained face and rose to her feet.

It was Old Alex's wish that Ellie
and King be remarried—a church wedding. It was the day of the ceremony and the Andrews mansion was being properly decorated.
King Westley was closeted with Alex in the latter's library.

"Well," said Alex, "here we are;
it's all set. You're finally going to be married properly. I still don't know how it happened, but you're going to be my son-in-law whether I like it or not. I guess you're pleased."

"Why, naturally, I—"

"There's one responsibility you're taking on. One that I'm really concerned about."

"What's that?" asked King.
"My daughter."

"Ellie? Oh, she's no responsibility."

"No? Say, listen—I've devoted a whole lifetime trying to tame that wildcat. Now, if you'll do what I tell you, perhaps I might develop a little respect for you. You never can tell."

"What would you like to have me
do?"

"Suck her!"
"At least once a day. Make her know you're the boss!"

The interview was over. Alex went to Ellie's room. To his surprise, Ellie was sobbing. It didn't take wily Alex long to find out the cause.

"What's his name?"
"Peter Warner."

"Peter Warner?" Alex's hand went to his pocket. A moment, then dropped, guiltily.

Ellie noted the movement, and reaching up, extracted a letter from her father's pocket. It was addressed to Alex and read:

"Dear Sir: I should like to have a talk with you about a financial matter in connection with your daughter, Peter Warner."

Ellie's voice was strident. "Looks like that was his only interest in me.
The reward."

"I'm sorry you read it."
"Are you going to see him?"

"I suppose so," answered Alex.
Ellie's voice was hard now. "Certainly! Pay him off. He's entitled to it. He did an excellent job. Kept me thoroughly entertained. It's worth every penny he gets!"

Alex waited while Peter was being ushered into the library. He switched on a dictograph switch and sat back. Peter strode in. Alex waited him to a seat and Peter flopped down.

"I was surprised," said Alex, "to get your note. My daughter hadn't told me anything about you. About your helping her."

"That's typical of your daughter.
Take those things for granted. Why does she think I lugged her all the way from Miami—for the love of it?"

"Please understand me," said Alex quietly. "When I say she didn't tell me anything about it, I mean not until a little while ago. She thinks you're entitled to anything you can get."

Peter was bitter. "Oh, she does, huh? Isn't that sweet of her? You don't suppose."

Alex shrugged. "I don't know. I'd have to see on what you base your claim. I presume you feel you're justified in—"

"If I didn't," interrupted Peter, "I wouldn't be here! I've got it all itemized." He threw a piece of paper on Alex's desk. Alex read the list:

"Cash outlay, $8.60. Topcoat, $15.
Suitcase, $7.50. Four ties, $4.00.
Three shirts, $4.50. Total, $39.60."

"I sold some drawers and socks, too," said Peter. "I'm throwing those in."

"And this is what you want—thirty-nine dollars and sixty cents?"
"Why not? I'm not charging you for the time I wasted."

"Let me get this straight. You want this thirty-nine sixty in addition to the ten thousand dollars?"

"What ten thousand?"

"The reward."
"Who said anything about a reward?" Peter's tone was sharp.

"The average man would go after the reward. All you seem to—"

"Listen," said Peter, "did anybody every make a sucker out of you? This is a matter of principle. Something you probably wouldn't understand. When somebody takes me for a buggy ride I don't like the idea of having to pay for the privilege."

"You were taken for a buggy ride?"
"Yeah—with all the trimmings.
Now, how about that check? Do I get it?"

Andrews, who had been studying Peter closely—and liked what he saw—smiled. "Certainly."

He wrote the check and handed it to Peter. He looked up suddenly.
"Do you love my daughter?"

"A guy," said Peter, evasively
"that'd fall in love with your daughter should have his head examined."
"That's an evasion."

"She grabbed herself a perfect running mate, King Westley! The pill of the century! What she needs is a guy that'd take a sock at her every day—whether it's coming to her or not."

Old Alex smiled.
Peter continued. "If you had half the brains you're supposed to have,
you'd have done it yourself—long ago."

"Do you love her?"
"Yes!" Peter snapped. "But don't let that against me. I'm a little screw myself!" He yanked the door open and strode out.

Some minutes later, Ellie entered the library. Alex sank back in his chair and smiled. Would Ellie, Alex wanted to know, care to hear a dictograph record of the conversation between Peter and himself? Ellie wasn't interested. Now, Alex grinned. With a shrug and a grimace and a flick of his hand he set the machine to working. Ellie walked to the window, apparently intent on the extensive lawn party that was taking place prior to the ceremony.

The record revolved for a moment,
then Peter's voice came back to the room. Each of Peter's concise, graphic sentences were repeated.
Then the final words:

"Do you love her?"
"Yes. But don't hold that against me. I'm a little screw myself!"

Old Alex was laughing now.
"There's a car all ready for you at the front gate. If you hurry, you can catch up to him."

Ellie was speechless. Her heart leaped like a playful puppy. Her breath caught.

"But you'll have to hurry," added Alex.

Ellie straightened suddenly. Alive again! She glanced out the window
—there was King Westley coming for her! Coming for her! Hurry, Ellie—hurry!

She ran up happily. Reaching up she grabbed her father's rugged head and planted a long kiss on his smiling lips. With a bound, she was out a back exit. In another moment, a powerful motor snorted and Alex Andrews was after her man—
Peter!

Several days later, Old Alex's
secretary rushed into the library.
"Here's another wire from Peter.
They're in Glen Falls, Michigan."

Alex read quickly. "What's holding up the amusement, you slow poke. The Walls of Jericho are toppling."

Alex laughed. "Send him a telegram right away. Just say: 'Let 'em topple.' Signed, 'Pop.'"

The secretary grinned. "Yes, sir."

Somewhere in Michigan in a tourist camp, a light is in one of the cabins—Ellie's and Peter's. An old man, the owner, came out the door.
His wife greeted him.

"Funny couple, ain't they?"
"Yeah."

"If you ask me, I don't think they're married."

"They're married, all right." The owner nodded. "I seen the license."

"Made me get 'em a rope and a blanket. On hot night like this, too.
Whadda you reckon that's for?"

"Blamed if I know. I just brought
'em a trumpet."

"Trumpet?"
"Yep. One of them toy things.
Sent me down to the store to get it.
Sounds crazy to me. Would they want a trumpet for?"

"Dunno."

Suddenly there was a piping toot-toot—a toot of a toy trumpet from the cabin. Immediately the windows went out. The Walls of Jericho had crumbled! With only a single thought emanating from the dark cabin. At last!

EARLY SETTLER, PREACHER, DIES AT MAY HOME

Rev. Sam C. Steele, 81, pioneer Baptist minister of this section, died suddenly at his home in May shortly after noon Friday. He had not been in ill health previously and ate a hearty lunch a short time before his death.

Funeral services were held at Amity Baptist church in Comanche county, which Mr. Steele helped to organize in summer of 1878, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon and interment was made in the cemetery there. The Masons had charge of services at the grave.

Pistol for Bible

Mr. Steele once laughingly said he traded his pistol for a Bible in the spring of 1894 when he was ordained to preach. A little later he was called as pastor of the Pleasant Valley Church, in north Brown county, and had served as pastor there ever since. It was his first pastorate and also his last. During these years, however, he also served as pastor for other churches in Brown and surrounding counties. He also helped to organize several churches.

It has been said of Mr. Steele that he had officiated in the marriage of more couples, had baptized more people and had preached more funerals than any other preacher in this section of Texas.

Born in old Hempstead county, Arkansas, February 5, 1853, Mr. Steele came to Texas in 1865 and settled in Hunt county, living there for ten years. While living there he was married January 11, 1874, to Miss Charity Lindley, who was born in Georgia in 1853, and came to Texas at four years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Steele, with eight others in a party, came to this section in 1875, and settled in the Amity community just across the Brown county line in Comanche county. Mr. Steele built the fourth log cabin in the community, and due the second well. They traveled in three ox wagons. In the party with Mr. Steele was his father, Thomas Steele, who was born in 1804 and died in 1879 at the age of 76 years and is buried at Amity cemetery. He served five years in the United States army when Red River was the boundary line of the United States. He came to Texas when it was now Ellis county in 1845, but later went back to Arkansas. He came back to Texas in 1865 with his family.

First View of Brownwood. Rev. Mr. Steele saw Brownwood for the first time in the month of May, 58 years ago, or in May, 1876. He and five others were traveling from their home in the Amity community to the southwest to look at the country. Brownwood was an outpost of civilization and consisted of only a few stores and residences. The party forded Pecan Bayou, which had been on a rise, and went on to the Colorado river. The river was so high they did not attempt to ford it and turned back home. Wild game was so plentiful that a good marksman could ride along and shoot all the meat he needed.

The first blacksmith shop at Rising Star, in Eastland county, was established by Mr. Steele in 1871. At that time the main stage line between Brownwood and Cisco came through Rising Star. Uncle Tommie Anderson operated a tavern where the stage drives and passengers stopped to eat. Anderson's son, Uncle Will Anderson, who still lives at Rising Star, operated a stable where the stage coaches stopped.

Mr. Steele operated the shop for a time and then sold it to Eli Cox and Joe Cone. He then went into the blacksmithing business at May.

Organized Church in 1878. He was ordained to preach on Easter Sunday 1894 at Amity Baptist church, which he had helped to organize in the summer of 1878, as the first Baptist church in the section. The church was organized with nine members under a brush arbor which Mr. Steele had helped to build. With the death of Mr. Steele only two of the original nine members are still living. They are Mrs. Steele and T. B. Landreth. Mr. Steele was one of the first deacons in the church.

The first steam boiler ever brought to Brown county was hauled from Fort Worth to Ohio by Mr. Steele for the late T. C. Yantis and his father in 1877. A steam gin and mill was established at Ohio. The boiler was drawn by five yokes of oxen and a month was required for the trip.

Mr. Steele used to attend services at the first Baptist church organized at Rising Star. The church was a mile or so east of the present town site, near the Rising Star cemetery. The church was in the Pecan Valley Association. N. T. Bvans was one of the first preachers in Brownwood.

Most of the supplies for this section were hauled by ox wagons from Fort Worth. People at May, Cross Cut, Cross Plains, Rising Star and other communities in the section in the early days had to go to Sipe Springs in Comanche county for their mail.

Mr. Steele took his first degree as a Mason at Sipe Springs in May, 1883. He was the first elected Worshipful Master of the Rising Star Lodge.

Surviving Mr. Steele are his wife and five children—Brownwood Bulletin

AN OLD FAMILY REMEDY

OUT OF PLACE IN YOUR ENGINE

PETROLEUM JELLY—an honored remedy in every family medicine chest—but what a trouble-maker in your motor oil!

For when you step on the starter in winter—it is petroleum jelly that makes your oil stiff and unresponsive. And when your engine warms up it is petroleum jelly that makes your oil water-thin.

Petroleum jelly has virtually been stripped from Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil—a new process requiring specially designed refrigerating equipment, operating at as low as 60° below zero—a much lower temperature than is required for just removing wax. All grades of Opaline are refined for year-around use.—(See Sinclair Law of Lubrication booklet which we will gladly give you.)

We sell Sinclair Opaline according to the Sinclair Law of Lubrication. This law is based on the fact that the space between piston and cylinder wall is widened by wear. The grade of oil which filled this space at 3,000 miles cannot safely bridge the gap and prevent gasoline dilution at 15,000 miles.

Sinclair Opaline is refined from selected paraffin base crudes in various grades—one of them is designed to fit your engine according to its present state of wear. Your speedometer will tell us the grade you require.

NEW G. E. DE LUXE REFRIGERATORS ARE NOW ON DISPLAY

Two new style de luxe G. E. refrigerators have been added to the G. E. refrigerator line according to an announcement made today by W. P. Murphy, manager of the Texas Power & Light Company.

"These new models represent the latest in electric refrigeration," Mr. Murphy said, "incorporating new beauty, new refinements, new conveniences, modern styling and lower operating cost."

The year 1933 reflected a greater interest in electric refrigeration sales than has ever before been experienced according to figures of the Electric Refrigeration Bureau, which show that a total of 1,065,105 electric refrigerators was sold in this country last year. Texas alone bought over 40,000 electric refrigerators last year.

"This increased interest in electric refrigeration is quite evident here," Mr. Murphy said. "People seem to demand more than ever proper refrigeration, fast freezing and an abundant supply of ice cubes—the things which are assured with electric refrigeration."

"Local dealers here and in other neighboring towns are predicting that this year will be a banner year in electric refrigerator sales."

Why
Liquid Laxatives
Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

Begin Taking Cardui
Today If You Suffer
Like This Lady Did

"WHEN I was a girl, I began taking Cardui," writes Mrs. Maggie Stanfield, of Crandall, Ga. "I was very irregular for twelve months. Nothing did me very much good until my mother began to give me this medicine. Then I got all right, stout and well."

"After I was married, I was in bad health. I began taking Cardui again. I was troubled with my back a lot. Was awfully restless. I could not sleep well. I just weighed 90 pounds when I began taking Cardui. I improved rapidly. Before long I weighed 126 pounds. I felt fine. I was able to do a good day's work."

Cardui is sold by druggists here.

District Conference, April 23-25 The Comanche church will be host to fifty-six other churches of this district at the time of the District Conference.

The following letter concerning that conference has been received from Rev. R. O. Sory, our Presiding Elder.

"I have been forced to change the date of our District Conference to April 23-25. The opening sermon will be preached Monday night, April 23rd, by Rev. J. W. Sharbutt our new pastor at Winters.

"One of the goals of our District this year is, to have 50 percent of our Conference collections paid in full by the District Conference. I sincerely hope that Comanche, the host of the District Conference, will set a good example to the other churches in the District by having half of their benevolences in full.

"This is the bread and meat of all our church work. We will succeed in the same measure that we support the great benevolent causes of the church. These hard years have been hard on the collections and our great connection interests have suffered greatly.

"I am looking forward to a great session of our Conference with the good folk of Comanche and feel that you good folk will entertain the Conference in a great way."

The Comanche Church so far has one of the best records in the district this year and since we are to be host to the other churches, we are especially anxious to maintain these standards and make an excellent report at Conference.

A. C. Haynes, Pastor.

MORH ABOUT SEARCH FOR BARROW

Local officers and officers of this section spent Monday and Tuesday nights in search for trace of the Blanket robbers who some feel sure was Barrow and his companion.

Following is the Brownwood Bulletin's version of the Blanket hold-up.

Sheriff Jack Hallmark and his deputies who rushed to Blanket about 3 o'clock Monday morning, shortly after the holdup of a gasoline service station in that city, are convinced that Clyde Barrow, the noted Texas desperado, and his cigar smoking "moll" Bonnie Parker, were the ones who forced Virgil Parsons, night-watchman, and Howard Strickland, operator of the filling station, to fill the gasoline tank of their light sedan and then dashed away as Parsons and Strickland blazed away at them with pistols.

The Bulletin stated the two Blanket men were at the filling station when the desperado drove his car in, covered them with a pistol, told them that he was Barrow and ordered his gas tank filled. The man believed to be Barrow did not get out of his car but kept the men covered throughout the time he was there. After getting the gasoline, Barrow, or whoever he was, thanked them and sped away. They grabbed their guns and each man fired twice at the speeding automobile. It is not believed that either shot took effect.

Unable to Describe Pair
Neither Parsons nor Strickland was able to give a very good description of the occupants of the car. They said that two persons were in the car but neither could determine whether the other person was a man or woman. One of the two in the car had on a cap, the man who ordered the gas tank filled and the other was bareheaded.

The car sped out of Blanket on the Mercer's Gap road and has not been sighted since.

The Blanket men who were held up early Monday morning did not get the license number of the car they serviced but said the car fitted perfectly the description of the car that Barrow was in when he shot down two highway patrolmen near Grapevine Sunday.

amount of land planted to cotton. Texas is a large state, many cotton farms have to be checked and passed on by cotton boards and for that reason the first cotton payment will probably be ready by the middle of May. Of course this is only a guess.

What to do with Land.

Contracted acres of both cotton and wheat is only to be used by the farmer to grow the necessary feed and food stuff for home uses. The whole story might be expressed in short, that no farmer who wants to live up to the contract will use these contracted acres for the planting of extra feed that could be used to produce a surplus of either crops or livestock or livestock products over what he normally produces. That if a farmer through planting these contracted acres to feed or food stuff and thereby release other acres for the production of surplus cash crops then he is violating his contract.

Home Much Land
If a farmer is providing for four horses or mules, 50 hens, and is fattening a beef steer for home butchering, 2 hogs, two sheep, two dairy cows, he would need 342 bushels of corn or grain sorghums or similar grain, about 13 tons of hay, about 8 acres of improved pasture, and 7 acres of hay, if he is to have plenty of feed.

Now at the rate of 20 bushels of corn per acre, 2 tons of hay per acre, this would require 17 acres of corn or grain, 7 acres of hay and 8 acres of pasture, a total of 32 acres. In addition, or home supply, an extra 8 acres would be needed for garden, orchard and peas, melons, potatoes and cane for syrup, making a total of 35 acres.

If the farmer in this case has provided none of these requirements in the past he will be permitted by cotton or wheat contracts to take 35 rented acres for this purpose. If he has previously had only 20 acres available for his living at home he will be permitted to take 15 rented acres to complete the 35 acres needed. If he has previously had 35 acres for living at home, and needs no additional land for this purpose, the contracts do not permit him to take any rented acres at all for home use.

In this latter case the farmer might plant the rented acres to permanent pastures or to soil erosion prevention crops, or to cover crops to turn under for soil enrichment.

Farmers who are interested in getting their land terraced and wish, may have terrace lines run where they wish to build terraces and after the rush of the crop season is over terrace this land. This land to be terraced can be counted as contracted acres.

In answer to whether corn can be planted on contracted cotton or wheat acres—will say that it can be where the feed is needed for home uses. This however may not apply to corn-hog contract signers who are to limit their corn acres.

NEW RELIEF PLANS ARE EXPLAINED

The new Relief Program in Comanche County, of interest to many people, is explained in the following communication from C. P. Little, Jr., County Administrator:

The complete termination of CWA activities will place the burden of supplying relief to indigent families on the shoulders of the following programs to be conducted by the Texas Relief Commission: Work Division (Work Relief), Direct Relief, the subsistence homesteads, and the rural rehabilitation projects.

Of particular interest in the new set-up is the new "Work Relief" card which will enable the administration to properly supervise the "Work Division" activities. Those unemployed, who are actually destitute and are physically able to work, after a thorough investigation has been made definitely establishing their relief needs, will be given the opportunity to work and earn up to their estimated relief need requirements. This work card is so designed as to limit the pay rolls to the actual relief requirements for each particular individual employed. Pay to persons not eligible for relief, or to relief clients in excess of the requirements of the individual family will not be approved in Austin. The new work card, though simple in form, will permit the definite placing of responsibility and indicate who is at fault if a client is allowed to earn from relief funds more than his relief budget requirements.

Staff Auditor, C. C. Gilland, of the Texas Relief Commission announced, after a conference with County Relief Chairman, K. L. Macon of the Comanche County Relief Board, that a thorough study had been made of Comanche County Relief problems and the new system installed. Mary Louise Grizzelle will take charge of the new set-up here effective April 1st, as Certifying Officer under C. P. Little, Jr., Administrator.

Chief Auditor Donnell emphasizes that this is a Relief Program, not a Project Program. Under the CWA, group employment was provided which approximated current business wages, whereas the present Relief Program can only supply relief to the destitute. When the building of roads, schoolhouse construction or other projects takes the place of the first objective, that of giving relief, the relief program has gone astray, and such expenditures constitute an erroneous expenditure of funds according to the terms of the Relief Acts under which relief funds are made available.—C. P. Little, Jr., County Administrator.

A TONIC Laxative

CONSTIPATION, with the annoying symptoms that usually come with it, cuts down organic force and disturbs normal health and well-being. A thorough cleansing of the digestive tract is of great assistance in the removal of sickening constipation symptoms.

When excessive accumulated waste matter disturbs and strains the muscles of the large intestines, rendering them temporarily unable to perform their wave-like evacuating movements, Theodor's Black-Draught is useful in stimulating them to activity, which, again started, should continue regularly until some future disturbance interferes. In this way, Theodor's Black-Draught is one of the TONIC laxatives, tending, as it does, to establish a regular habit of evacuation.
